SATURDAY EVENING, MARCH 2.

The True Iuwardness of the Ku-Klux Outrages.

Ex-Governor Moses, of South Carolina, in his confession, published in yesterday's New York Herald, says:

Whenever a rumor would come from Washington that the troops were to be removed and the government left to protect and sustain itself, immediately a consultation would be held to decide to what measures resort should be laid to counteract the intended movement. At these meetings there were always present Scott, the Governor; J. L. Neagle, the Comptroller General, (who generally had especial charge of "outrages" in the up country;) Moses, the Adjutant and Inspector General and Speaker of the House, (afterward Governor;) Chamberlain, the Attorney General, and Parker tha State Treasurer. Each of these men had their especial personal dependents and henchmen in the shape of deputy United States marshals and State constables, to whom, after the meetings were adjourned, there instructions would be given to begin their operations in various parts of the State. The expense of the move. ments of these men, after they had received their orders and had gone to execute them. was enormous, and was all paid by the State. Ia accordance with Scott's request the Legislature had given him authority to establish a paid State constabulary, and to maintain for their use horses, &c., in the shape of camp equipage. --At the head of this force Scott had placed one John B. Hubbard, a thoroughly skilled detective and a desperate man, who had formerly taken a prominent part in the investigations conducted by the United States government which resulted in the hanging of Mrs. Surratt. In addition to this constabulary force Scott imported into the State one "Colonel" Kerrigan, with a band of about twenty-five desperadoes and roughs from New York, whose expenses he paid, in addition to large monthly wages, and whom he domiciled in various parts of the up county here, with instructions to work up the outrage business and to do all in their power short of committing overt acts to incite the democrats to open resistance. These men did their work well and richly earned the money they received. Most of them were stationed in Union county, where there was a majority of white voters, and the story of the wrongs and injuries they inflicted on the unoffending people there would indeed fill a volume. Their expense was borne out of an unlimited appropriation made by the Legislature for Scott to maintain an "armed force," and which authorized him to expend any moneys in the Treasury

PLEASANT ROOMS AND FRESH OYS- not otherwise appropriated. But even this importation of roughs from New York was not enough to create the con sternation which was desired, and by application to the United States government, supported by D. T. Corbin, then the District Attorney for our State, Scott succeeded in having an officer of the United States Army specially dotailed and ordered to report to him, to take full charge of the hunting down of the terrible Ku Klux and to bring them to trial and conviction. This man's name was Lewis Merrill, and he was and is still, I suppose, a major of the Seventh regiment United States cavalry. He was well fitted for the business for which he had been selected. Cold blooded and heartless, and as keen on the scent as a sleuchhound, he admirably performed his mission, and, in conjunction with Corbin and under orders from Scott he succeeded in making of South Carolina a perfect pandemonium for two years. No pen can record, no tongue can recite the insults he heaped upon the people, and at the slightest show of resentment the victim would be hurried to trial on the charge of being a Ku Klux, and would soon be heard of co more except as an inmate of the Albany penitentiary. Although Merrill was an officer of the United States Army on full pay during his Ku Klux campaign, and although the regulations of the War Department expressly pro hibit any officer from receiving pay from any State authorities, still for the whole time he was here he was regularly paid large sums by Governor Scott (in addition to his travelling expenses) out of the armed force funds. The vouchers for these payments as received by Merrill himself, found on file in the State Treasury, are now among the records of the Investigating Committee, and form a strong case against him for infraction of the regulations of the War Department. But this was not all. Long after the disappearance of all symptoms of Ku-Kluxism in our State, Merrill went before the Legisla. ture, and by dint of the most constant system of lobbying and by bribing the most preminent members of that body, together with most of the State officers, succeeded in collecting for himself, from the revenue of South Carolina, about $22,000 as a reward for his services to the republican politicians.
